Dublin, 16th June, 1855.

Dear Miss Chapman

I had a letter from Miss Lotten ther enclosing a note she had just received from you in which you regret the non arrival of the Bedouin Sketches. They arrived very late this year and were immediately forwarded with the exception of a small parcel to Newcastle which was for some time delayed. You were at that time in ~~Edinburgh~~ Cumberland and about to leave for London or Bristol. I thought it would be safest to send to Cumberland and as you were very uncertain about going to Bristol I sent the parcel along with others to London, care of the Publishers of the Advocate, by Swedish, with directions to have them at once forwarded to you. The rest were to Mr Vanderweyen, Portland Place. He sent me he could do so. This day I had a reply to another enquiry, saying he had done so, weyen in particular.

I wish write a short note by this post to Mr. Van de weyer saying that I forwarded to him a check for the whole on very delivery to him as soon as possible. This will take many days & I wish say nothing of the deed but he may have some prejudice against it. I do not think that the deliberations of the American parish would be so promptly & faithfully carried out by any one as by Mrs Webb and me. For Mrs Ritten would probably pay the charges out of her own purse which we had them promptly & charge any incidental costs to Boston — having always been regard to economy of this treasury. With respect to Mrs Paul I do not see what else I could have done.

As it was evidently Mrs Ritten's wish you should have a personal explanation I have before my note with Mrs Webb by this time you have doubtless heard of the death of our dear Mrs Ritten. I heard it was the first time in a letter from Miss Cotton of this Month and yesterday. Miss E. Cotton began quite gaily, as I thought, to speak of her father's light-heartedness in having completed a protest against the conduct of the B. & L. Society entirely the late Conference in London. which was intended for publication in the July Advocate and how he saw his way clear to an explanation in the Advocate of his or our views of Dr Lanphear's doings - then the Speech of the late Harvey Lee Party at his house - his father's cheerfulness - his decease - & his death. You will know what a man he was and what a friend the cause has lost in him. My acquaintance with him began I think in 1865 with some enquiries he made of me about Lee Harvey matters I answered very fully, being glad to have such an intelligent inquirer - then followed our meeting in London, my visit to him & and his visit to me. I never knew a man in whom I could have more entire confidence.

He was as open as the day and when he saw his misfortune he saw it completely. The world will feel & deeply regret to see how that he was not to be seen in it. How Caroline & Emma take your family, will lament him. He was a fine of a man

Miss Ruthven's state of mind is beautiful & simple - and such a father could not have left a brother daughter

With kindest regards to Emma I am yours ever truly

Rich D Webb

If you should receive this panel I would be much obliged by a line from Em. tell me what Emma was married to this publick man or - & that we last heard of P. Pittsburg. She will bitterly he will lament his loss.
